

By Carl Collen

Monday 6th January 2020, 9:58 GMT

Oppy admired in Canada once more

Fresh produce group recognised among Canada's ten Most Admired Corporate Cultures for the second time

John Anderson, chairman and CEO of Oppy

Fruit and vegetable grower-supplier Oppy has been recognised for the second time by Waterstone Human Capital, Canada's leading cultural talent management firm, for fostering one of Canada's ten Most Admired Corporate Cultures in its enterprise category.

The group, which said that it had enjoyed one of its best-ever performances in 2019, was also honoured in the same category in 2016.

Canada's 10 Most Admired Corporate Cultures recognises best-in-class Canadian organisations for fostering high performing corporate cultures that help sustain a competitive advantage.

"Oppy's expect the world from us promise extends to our team as well as our customers, and has served as a guiding light for our culture for many years," said chairman and CEO John Anderson.

"Uniting to achieve shared and precise goals, we have managed to form a fundamental harmony that drives our business forward by empowering our people to do their absolute best," he outlined. "This is no easy task considering the complex and often turbulent environment we operate in. The exceptional teamwork and communication that is the norm at Oppy are at the core of our competitive advantage and will undoubtedly play an essential role in our success well into the future."