Peru says yes to Spanish citrus and persimmon

Move paves the way for shipments of other Spanish products to the region

Peru has given the green light for imports of Spanish citrus and persimmon, opening up another export beyond the European Union or Spanish producers.

The Ministry of Agrarian Development and Irrigation (Midagri) authorised imports of fresh mandarins, oranges and persimmon that have been subjected to cold treatment.

Spain's Agriculture Ministry said the move opens the door for exports of other products to Peru and other regional markets.

Midagri said exports will be able to start once cold treatment processes have been verified.
