

Britain's favourite fresh produce magazine since 1895

By Maura Maxwell

Thursday 3rd March 2016, 9:03 GMT

Short-term US mango shortage looms

Availability through to the end of March will dip before rising to record volumes in April

The availability of mangoes in the US is expected to be unseasonably low in the coming weeks due to a combination of an early end to the Peruvian season and delays to the Mexican deal.

The National Mango Board (NMB) said the Peruvian season had ended sooner and more abruptly than usual due to an El Niño-related weather event at the end of January, while production in southern Mexico had been affected by heavy rainfall in October/November, which impacted trees during the flowering stage, reducing fruitset and delaying the next stage of flowering.

Fruit quality was also affected in some of the regions that are now being harvested. "Due to the lower than normal volumes and quality that is currently being harvested, a significant amount of this crop is being consumed by Mexico's domestic market," the NMB said.

In spite of the short-term fall in availability, overall volume is projected to hit record levels in the April to July period as the autumn rains stimulated a delayed but robust second flowering which has an extremely high fruit set and will be ready for harvest beginning in April.

The NMB added that the Guatemalan crop is also delayed and projected to have a concurrent peak in April/May.

It advised retailers to plan big promotions starting in mid-April based on the increased Mexican and Guatemalan mango volume that is currently projected.

<http://www.fruitnet.com/americafruit/article/1474/parts-of-san-diego-quarantined-as-psyllid-count-mounts>

© Copyright Market Intelligence Ltd - Fruitnet.com 2014. The copyright on this article and all content published on Market Intelligence Ltd - Fruitnet.com is held by Market Intelligence Ltd - Fruitnet.com Limited, a joint venture between Market Intelligence Limited and Dr Rolf M Wolf Media GmbH. All rights reserved. Neither this article nor any part of it may be reproduced, stored or transmitted in any form, including print-outs, screen grabs and information retrieval systems, without the prior permission of the copyright owners.

FRUITNET.COM