Veg consumer focus for EVS2015

Annual meeting of Europe's leading vegetable companies will look at new commercial strategies for growing sales

The second edition of European Vegetables Strategies will look more closely at key trends in the European consumer market for fresh vegetables.

Following its successful debut in 2014, the annual one-day conference is set to return to Brussels on 7 May with the goal of helping Europe's leading fresh vegetable companies develop new commercial and marketing strategies in order to grow their sales.

Programme topics at this year's event include:

- Let's grow consumer demand: new strategies to win more sales
- Fresh vegetables 2025: what do shoppers of the future really want?
- Improving the shopper offer: new food retail formats target fresh
- Taste matters: the search for perfection in taste
- Buying with brains: human psychology and physiology determines shopping choices

- Trend watch: the new winners in the fresh vegetable market
- Exploring alternatives: get more growth from established market sectors

Plus, break-out sessions will focus on the following topics:

- Expanding the category into fresh juices
- Generation Y: learning the language of the new consumers

This year's European Vegetable Strategies kicks off on the evening of 6 May with an informal get-together - your chance to meet with other delegates and enjoy a fine glass of Belgian beer!
