Fresh Produce India goes online

India's leading fresh produce conference event will now take place online as a series of five virtual sessions

The annual Fresh Produce India conference and expo is to be hosted online for the first time, marking a first for the world of fresh produce conference events.

With the global coronavirus crisis presenting a major challenge for people across the international fresh produce business, Fresh Produce India organiser Asiafruit – part of Fruitnet Media International – has opted instead to livestream the event online for free on Thursday 23 April 2020.

"From our studios in London and Melbourne, Asiafruit's Chris White and John Hey are hosting five sessions of quality insight and ideas for the future of the fresh produce business in India," the group said in a statement.

"They'll be joined by speakers and expert panelists from India and the rest of the world to discuss the challenges that face India today."

Fresh Produce India Live is completely free to join via smartphone or computer with an internet connection.
