The event will explore how the European berry market has changed in the past three months as a result of the coronavirus crisis, and look at what this means for its longer-term development.

It will also include a preview of the forthcoming Global Berry Congress, which has been moved to 7-9 December.

Joining Mike Knowles, Fruitnet's editorial director for Europe, for the online briefing will be a number of leading analysts and industry experts, including:

Davide Perotto

Consumer insight director, Europanel (UK)

Cindy van Rijswijk

Senior industry analyst – fresh produce, Rabobank (Netherlands)

Jaime Sánchez

Product Manager – berries, SanLucar (Spain)

Danny Francis

Head of Europe – berries, T&G and Worldwide Fruit (UK)

Samuel Rowe

Managing Director, BerryWorld Varieties (UK)

Jorrit de Vries

Head of Business Development – Northern Europe, Planasa (Netherlands)

Our speakers will discuss what has happened to the fresh berry market since the start of 2020, as well as offering their view on where the soft fruit category stands in terms of its longer-term expansion.

They will also explain where investment should be targeted in the coming months, focusing in particular on variety development and the use of new technologies.
