Keeping you informed

FRUITNET

The situation is serious. And at Fruitnet we're taking it very seriously indeed

Like you, everyone at Fruitnet has been working from home since last week.

The story of Coronavirus is developing fast all over the world. Everywhere you look, the fresh produce industry is working flat out to ensure everyone is supplied with the best fresh fruit and vegetables. They've never been more essential to health and well-being.

We've started tagging our #heroesoffreshproduce online to showcase those huge efforts that fresh produce people and companies are doing to keep feeding the world. Join us and start tagging too!

In the meantime, our global editorial team is posting all the latest news several times every day here on Fruitnet.com. Just click on Coronavirus in the Topics menu above and see all the key developments across the globe.

Listen to our new podcast

We've also just launched Fruitbox, our new twice-weekly audio blog where we interview fresh produce faces from around the world to hear how they're managing their businesses through this unprecedented global crisis.

And if you're not already one of the thousands of leading industry decision-makers already receiving one of our free daily newsletters, you can sign up here.

Fruitnet Daily News, for example, brings you the most important news stories, which can help you make the best decisions for your business.

And if you and your company have a message to share with the industry, then you can count on us to help you get it out to the market.

In the meantime, we are hard at work on print editions of Eurofruit, Asiafruit, Fresh Produce Journal, and Produce Plus magazines, and for German-speakers we are busy posting online and in print at Fruchthandel.de.

As for our planned conference events, we will assess the situation around mid-April and will keep you posted on how things proceed.

Sending very best regards from everyone at Fruitnet.
